

Having experienced extremely poor service from a Bell company in regard to their email address policy, I can only assume that eliminating competition in this field will result in even worse service. Access to networks for independent internet service providers should definitely be preserved as it will foster competition and alternatives for the internet user / consumer.